The Church Family

Pioneer Life on the Bay of Quinte, 1904; (pages 225 - 229)

"Oliver Church was of English descent, and came to Canada from England in the early part of the last century. He selected about one hundred and fifty acres in Prince Edward County, and with the pluck and determination that characterized his race, launched himself against the perils and difficulties which he knew awaited him in his venture, resolved not to be eclipsed by the sturdy band of U.E. Loyalists who, already acclimated in the southern part of the country, were right manfully struggling around him. Having raised his shanty, and cleared a breathing space, he looked around for someone who might impart to his rude domicile something of the home look that lived in his memory as one of the dearest things he had known in England. He had not far to seek for one well able to stand by his side in the arduous life upon which he had entered. He found her in Mary Clute, the daughter of Garrett Clute, a neighbor settled in the same district. Richard J., one of the Pioneer's sons, now resident in Cherry Valley, related that when the family had outgrown the narrow limits of the shanty, that his mother, with an ability and zeal second only to that of the Pioneer himself, helped to erect a log house, which they built, from start to finish, with their own hands.

"But this was no sooner accomplished, than Oliver Church was called upon to show his manly qualities in a very different sphere of action. It had not been his privilege to support the mother country in the Revolution; but now, when the United States showed themselves desirous of invading Canada, he was one of the first to enlist. He served through the war, which began in 1812, to its close, in 1814, and so distinguished himself as to rise from the ranks to be captain of his company. At the close of the war, he took over a hotel in Picton and was popular as a landlord. The building in which he played the part of Boniface, at a time when there were many turbulent spirits around, was standing up to five or six years ago. It occupies a site on Main Street, nearly opposite the present railway station. A man of remarkable physical strength, and determined to keep a reputable, orderly house, his decision of character, and even his physical prowess, contributed to this end.

"After this experience as hotel landlord in Picton, he returned to farming, and located at South Bay, on a holding now occupied by Archibald Church, one of his descendants. Here he lived for a number of years, when he reverted to his former occupation of hotel keeping, this time in North Marysburgh, where he kept what was known as "The White Horse" for seven or eight years, and where he proved himself to be a very popular landlord. His military ardor was stirred anew in connection with the troubles of '37 and '38, during which time he rendered the government important service; his hotel was frequently the head quarters of that section of the army whose duty it was to defend this part of the coast. The light horse cavalry were continually on the move between Picton and Oliver Church's hotel, where the pioneer acted the part of scout, and often supplied valuable information in regard to the shipping interests of the Government, then seriously menaced by the rebels.

"And now he gave up, for the second time, his occupation of hotelkeeper and returned to farming. Two or three years more farming, and we find him the landlord of the hotel at Stone Mill. Inn keeping was no longer an experiment with Oliver Church; he was prepared to find himself the popular host, and as such he was known at Stone Mill for five or six years. But what with settling and farming and soldiering he had drawn heavily even on his extraordinary endowment of physical strength and he preferred to close his life, as he had begun it in this country, and died a farmer.

The Pioneer had a reputation for staunch and vigorous principle, which only increased amid the external vicissitudes of his life. Although for many years as a hotelkeeper, he was himself almost and abstainer from alcoholic stimulants, "and did what he could to promote sobriety in others. In politics he was an active conservative. Only two of his children are alive at this date; Richard J. and Ellen, who married Daniel Murney, and settled finally at Dresden.

"Richard J. Church saw his eighty-second birthday on March, 11th, 1904. He resides in Cherry Valley, cultivates a fruit farm with a vigor surprising in a many of his years, and retains the same interest in fishing and sailing as in his younger days. He has been twice married; first, to Minnie Welbanks, and second, to Ruth Snider. His two youngest sons, Sylvester and Royal, live on the homestead, and conduct a grist mill and machine shop. They are known throughout the district as enterprising and useful citizens."
