Generation One

1. James (Jacobus) Striker #189516.

Pioneer Life on the Bay of Quinte, The Striker Family; (pages 789 - 791)

"During the closing years of the eighteenth century James Striker lived in Dutchess County, N.Y. where he owned a large property, occupied a good social position, and lived unobtrusively among revolutionary surroundings. He held that political feeling should not prejudice family affections. Among the relatives to whom he accorded a ready and affectionate welcome were two young nephews who sided with the royalists. This friendly intercourse became subject to the displeasure of the Continental authorities. That their visits were regarded by the rebels with undisguised dissatisfaction soon came to the ears of the young men, and lest any censure should fall upon their uncle, they employed somewhat greater secrecy than was at all warranted, when leaving the country, with the unlooked for result that James Striker was court-martialled for harboring spies and abetting them to escape.

"But a revolutionary officer of high rank intervened on behalf of the accused. He pointed out the injustice of charging the affections of a man with high treason; and they reprieved James Striker, but confiscated all his property. Without wealth, and ill at ease among those who had misjudged him, he felt his only course was emigration to Canada. After enduring appointed many hardships of travel, he reached Hallowell township, which was then a forest wilderness. He settled at Greenbush, and died about the year 1835, being buried in the Picton parish churchyard.

"A grandson of the Pioneer, Gideon Striker, was a public man of some note in his day. At an early age he started business for himself as a druggist, and prospered greatly. He evinced a keen interest in the municipal affairs of his town and the political questions of his country; was elected Town Councillor and Reeve, and for three years served as Warden. He served as M.P.P. for eighteen years in the interests of the Reform party; was a Justice of the Peace, and a lieutenant-colonel of militia."
